FATHER OF BIG FAMILY KILLED BY SHALE FALL

Isaiah McDonald, of Milesburg, Victim of Sad Fate

HEAD STRUCK WHEEL

The community of Milesburg was very sadly shocked on Tuesday when one of the highly respected citizens and an employe of the Milesburg Brick company—Isaiah McDonald—was instantly killed. Practically every bone in his body was broken when he was caught under a fall of shale while at work in the shale hole north of the brick plant.

Mr. McDonald was spoken of in highest terms by his foreman, Edward Kinne, who said: "McDonald was a good workman. He had a very large family dependent upon him for support, there being seven children under sixteen years at home, the youngest a babe in arms. He made good money and did not spend it foolishly but it seemed to take it all so that his death leaves the family in sad circumstances. He very seldom had any time to himself, being a steady worker, but when he did get an hour off duty he went fishing, this being his most loved sport."

As he was working as usual, with no thought of any impending danger, the big slab of shale, estimated as being at least twenty feet high, quickly fell and seemed to trap McDonald by the feet, so that he was violently hurled forward and his head struck the edge of a wheel on the truck the men were loading. The shale then fell over his body but very little of it was upon his face, so that the men were positive he did not smother but was instantly killed, likely by the blow when his head struck the wheel.

The shale was dug away from him and a physician summoned, who pronounced him dead and the body was taken to Wetzler's undertaking establishment and prepared for burial.

Two other workmen, Hazel Johnston and Theodore Feizer, were also digging clay nearby, being the only other workmen in the shale hole. They were far enough away from the edge of the bank, however, to escape the fall of shale.

Isaiah McDonald was a native of Grampian, Clearfield County, and was born 43 years ago. His mother Mrs. Jane McDonald, is a resident of Grampian. Nine brothers and sisters, mostly residents of Clearfield County, his widow and the following children also survive: Herman and Thelma, at Grampian; Harry, John, Anna, Isaiah, Winford, Pauline, and Vanetta, at home. Funeral services will be held on Friday morning and burial made in Treziyulny cemetery.

ROBBED FARMER'S HOME

Young Couple Picking Huckleberries When Thief Came.

Mr. and Mrs. Rufus D. Corman have informed local authorities of the robbery of their home on Monday afternoon by a thief who was not satisfied to take a check of $42 from Mr. Corman and the wrist watch of his young wife, but stole her wedding ring and then had the check cashed, it is alleged.

Sheriff Dukeman thinks he has a tracer on the robber, however, having gained a description of him at the Schaeffer hardware store here, where the check was cashed. He is described as a young man, dapper and active, well dressed and likely headed toward Tyrone.

The Cormans, who reside on the Valentine farm along the road from Zion to Jacksonville, were picking huckleberries near their home, they said, when the robber got into their home by prying open a window. Mrs. Corman said, "Mr. Corman was not very well and did not go to work. During the afternoon we thought of gathering some huckleberries and locked the door. All the windows were nailed fast. The thief forced one of the windows and went out the door. We found on our return the house had been ransacked."

DIPHTHERIA CLAIMS GIRL

Home of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Young Made Sad by Death.

After a brief illness from diphtheria, Dorothy, 13-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew B. Young, of Bellefonte, died yesterday morning at 1 o'clock.

Two other children in the family, Grace and Charles, also are ill. The home was only quarantined this week. Surviving are her parents and the following brothers and sisters: Geo. and Mrs. Chas. Saxion, Bellefonte; Mrs. Earl Dawson, Altoona; Malcolm, Russell, Grace, Caroline and Charles, at home.

GRANGE PICNIC

Getting Park at Centre Hall Ready for Annual Event.

Grange Park never appeared more beautiful than at present as work begins in earnest in preparation for the coming Encampment and Fair, September 1—7. The grounds were surely well chosen and the growth and development prove the wisdom and foresight of its founders.

The committee is again planning for campers', friends' and visitors comfort, pleasure, education and entertainment for the entire week.

Each department will be a credit to the Encampment and Fair, no effort being spared to improve and build a better institution each year.

Necessary repairs and changes are under way. The new arrangements in tent locations, it is hoped, will prove as pleasant as the old.

Exhibits promise to be more complete than ever as interest grows. To secure the liberal premiums care in the selection of exhibits is urged in every department.

A fine program is planned for Sunday. Free entertainments on Grange Park will be given each day. Plenty of band music.

Wednesday—Grand Army Day—an educational program has been arranged for the afternoon, and speakers representing the Department of Public Instruction will address the people on present day educational problems. The Veterans' Club will also have a fine program.

Thursday—Grange Day—the National Grange will have a representative there, as also will the Pennsylvania State Grange. In addition, many men and women identified with Grange work and Grange history in Pennsylvania will attend the gathering.

The stage to be used presenting the pageant on Tuesday evening, September 4 and Wednesday evening, September 5, is now under construction.

The pageant will be a big thing worked out through community efforts, under the direction of W. R. Gordon of the Rural Life Organization, aided by interested people in a number of localities. It will portray the history of agriculture and its future development, the organization of the Grange and many symbolical features and scenes. A large number of men and women, boys and girls will be used to stage this spectacle. Nowhere in Centre county or Central Pennsylvania has a similar work been attempted. The best talent the county affords is interested in its preparation, and it is the intention to make it the big thing of this Encampment and Fair, and free on Grange Park.

All needed supplies can be purchased on Grange Park. Where possible campers should provide themselves with oil stoves. Campers may have electric light placed in tent at their own expense.

Grange Park will be open to campers beginning Thursday, August 30, and admission charged from that day, except Sunday, when admission is free.

Fifty cents admission, good for the week, will be charged those 14 years of age and over. Those under 14 years free admittance.

Auto admission, 50 cents.

Tent rents, $6.00 and $7.00, according to size. No tickets given with tents.

All trains stop at Grange Park beginning Saturday, Sept. 1st.

Fish and Game Meeting.

Dr. J. J. Kilpatrick, of Bellefonte, who presided over a gathering of local sportsmen some weeks ago, has called a meeting of the Bellefonte Fish & Game Association at the Court House, Wednesday evening, August 22nd, at 8 o'clock. It is proposed discussing plans for the propagation of fish and game for the coming season. Game Protector Thomas Mosier will address the meeting. All sportsmen are urgently requested to attend and endeavor to have others accompany them.

Cars Wrecked, Occupants Escaped

A Ford touring car occupied by Silas Rudy, Martin McCafferty and Jerry Sauers, of State College, and a big touring car occupied by a family from Curwensville, were considerably damaged in a collision north of Pleasant Gap, where the road by the fish hatchery comes onto the state highway. The occupants escaped injury excepting a child in the Curwensville car, who sustained a painful bump on the head.

Freddie Craft Hurt.

Freddie Craft, the little son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Craft, of Bellefonte, was slightly injured last Thursday morning when he ran into the rear wheel of an automobile being driven on Spring street. Freddie was running across the street and apparently was watching his playmates and did not see the car until he ran against the wheel. He was thrown to the street and severely bruised.

BELLEFONTE CENTRAL'S WORST WRECK IN YEARS

Trainmen Escape From Death by Jumping from Engine

ENGINEER RIDER HURT

Engineer James Rider was very painfully injured, Conductor William Switzer and Fireman Samuel Murphy escaping unhurt, when an engine and a big steel car, loaded with stone, got away on the American Lime & Stone company siding at Filmore on Friday afternoon. Mr. Rider was brought to his home in Coleville and no serious results are expected but it may be some time before he will be able to return to work.

Van Jodon, one of the Bellefonte Central Railroad company's most trusted and active employes, urged for a statement, said:

"The tracks on the siding, which is very steep, were overgrown with weeds. This got under the wheels and greased the rails so that the trainmen could do nothing The engine and car skidded along and struck six loaded cars that had been left on the main tracks. One end of a box car was smashed and the tender ruined but the engine will be taken to the shops and I think we will be able to repair it. The men saved themselves by jumping. Undoubtedly they would have been scalded if they had remained on the engine."

The engine got away when a big car, loaded with limestone, was being taken from the American Lime & Stone Co. quarry at the Filmore siding. Before going to the quarry, the engineer left 2 cars on the main track. The siding to the quarry has a steep grade and the brakes refused to take hold so that the engineer was helpless to stop the engine and loaded car. They kept gaining speed until they crashed into the cars on the main tracks.

The force of the collision was such that the locomotive was completely wrecked as was also one of the cars on the main track—a box car. The other cars were also damaged. The engine and tender buckled, the engine being on top of the tender in an almost upright position, with the cab almost to the smoke stack on the engine. Bellefonte Central officials were busily engaged on Saturday clearing away the wreckage.

Struck Hand Against Saw.

Bert Poorman, one of the most widely known residents of this vicinity, had his right hand very painfully cut by the teeth of a wood-cutting saw operated by a gasoline engine on Saturday. It may be several fingers will be amputated to save his hand. Mr. Poorman resides on the farm west of Coleville which he recently purchased. While the engine was in operation he was working about it when he slipped and fell. Throwing out his right arm in a natural movement to get hold of something to break the force of the fall, his hand struck the teeth of the saw. A local physician was summoned and Mr. Poorman has since then been at his home, every effort being made to prevent infection and complications.

Labor Day at Snow Shoe.

Under the auspices of the Snow Shoe Base Ball association there will be a Labor Day picnic held at the Snow Shoe driving park. This is a most delightful place to spend an enjoyable day. There will be plenty of amusements for young and older folks. The merry-go-round will be operated all day and evening. There will be base ball games during the morning and afternoon. Dancing from 7 to 12 in the evening. Refreshments will be served on the ground.

Arm Fractured in Two Places.

H. J. Hartranft, for many years a miller at the Lamb street mill, now operated by Bashoar and Ulsh, met with a painful misfortune last Thursday. He noticed one of the belts slipping and was applying belt dressing with a stick when a projection caught the stick and jerked Mr. Hartranft's right hand between the belt and pulley before he had a chance to act. The arm was fractured in two places between the elbow and wrist.

Cars Damaged in Collision.

Two touring cars, a Ford and a Star were considerably damaged in a head-on collision on the state road east of Zion on Sunday evening. The occupants miraculously escaped injury. J. E. Snavely, of Lock Haven was driving the Ford, and John Scarp, of Bellefonte, the Star. The Ford car was towed to a local garage for repairs but the Star was wrecked too badly to be repaired.

SERIOUSLY INJURED AFTER FALLING UNDER WAGON

Team Ran Away and Farmer Fell From Load of Rye.

WILL LIKELY RECOVER

While hauling rye from the field to the barn last Thursday, Lester C. Stevens, of Benore, had a very narrow escape from death. His horses ran away and when Mr. Stevens tried to get hold of the lines, he fell in front of the wagon.

The front and rear wheels on one side of the wagon passed over his body. Three ribs were fractured and he was otherwise painfully injured. It was feared his collar bones were broken, but an X ray picture showed this was not the case, but his right shoulder was dislocated.

Dr. Foster, of State College, was called and gave him first aid treatment, after which he was removed to the Bellefonte hospital and is reported as getting along nicely.

GASOLINE PRICES TUMBLE

Wave for Lower Rates Sweeping West and Headed This Way.

The next few days will determine whether the entire country will share in the gasoline price war which had its inception in South Dakota last week and which has since been sweeping over the west and middle west. In a few days time the price of gasoline tumbled 6 to 10 cents per gallon, and the end is not in sight. The Federal Government is said to be planning an investigation of prices and general oil conditions.

Governor McMaster, of South Dakota, started something when he declared that the selling price of gasoline was too high. It was somewhere about 21 cents in that state at the time. In Bellefonte gasoline is today retailing at 24 cents; in fact, it is more often above that figure than below it. Standard Oil Co. people laughed at Governor McMaster for a time, but they changed their tune when he suddenly ordered thousands of gallons of gasoline purchased in Chicago to be retailed in South Dakota at 16 cents per gallon. When the oil company officials saw that he couldn't be bluffed they quickly dropped their prices accordingly, hoping that matters would subside in a day or two. But Governor McMaster appealed to other and nearby states to join in a war against outrageous gasoline prices. Quite a number have done so. In every such state the oil companies have surrendered and lowered prices. Down in Texas gasoline is retailing at 10 and 11 cents.

The proposed federal investigation is intended to reveal whether or not there has been combination in restraint of trade among the oil companies, whereby they have held up prices until western and middle-western states rebelled and started an upheaval that is now spreading over the east. It is believed by some that with the smashing of the gasoline trust the movement will be directed against other things and take them up one by one until prices generally are restored tosomething like normal.

PRISONERS SIGN WAIVER

Will Plead Guilty Since Chance of Escape Is Cut Off.

The three prisoners—Clair Jamison, Arthur and Ed Fiddell—who were placed in cells in the death house after making sensational attempts to escape from the Centre County jail, apparently don't like their new quarters. Price and Jamison have signed waivers to standing trial in court and will likely plead guilty at a special session of court in the near future. Fiddell seems more desperate and sticks to his original plan that he will stand trial in court. The charges to which Jamison and Price have indicated they will plead guilty are assault and battery, aggravated assault and battery with intent to kill, and breaking prison.

The men could be sentenced to a minimum of 45 years, it is said, on these charges. In signing the waiver and agreeing to plead guilty, however it is understood that the men expect some clemency to be shown them in court.

Purchased a New Hearse.

Undertaker F. V. Goodhart, of Centre Hall, and his wife departed on Tuesday morning for Piqua, Ohio, to drive home a new hearse which Mr. Goodhart recently purchased. They expect to reach home toward the end of the week. It is said the hearse is one of the finest, a Meteor model finished in attractive gray and equipped with a six-cylinder motor.

WILL HAVE TWO OUTINGS

Williams Reunion at Port Matilda Williams Picnic at Martha.

Selection of a location for the annual Williams reunion and picnic to be held Saturday, August 18th, has created quite a stir in the upper Bald Eagle valley. For years past the reunion has been held at the Miles grove at Martha. This year the reunion committee and the representatives of Miles grove were unable to come to terms satisfactory to both and the committee announced that the reunion would be held on Saturday at the Port Matilda athletic park. A day or two ago members of the reunion committee reiterated this announcement, stating that among the various features there would be morning and afternoon baseball games between Port Matilda and Sandy Ridge clubs. Regardless of any other announcements that might be made, it was declared that the reunion would be at Port Matilda. And that's that.

On Tuesday another committee came to Bellefonte and stated that while it was true that the Williams reunion would be held at Port Matilda on Saturday, there would also be a Williams picnic on the same date at Miles grove at Martha. And that's that.

"The Republican" has endeavored to give both sides of the warm weather controversy. As we understand matters there will be two outings on the same date, within a few miles of each other. There are enough Williamses, and their kin, scattered through Bald Eagle valley and over the county to provide a goodly sized crowd for half a dozen picnics on the same day, so there is no reason why, if they all attend one or the other, both outings scheduled for Saturday should have large crowds and an enjoyable time. Competition is the life of trade, also picnics. This year's mix-up will be a little bit hard on the candidates for county offices who will be compelled to attend both outings and carefully refrain from taking sides with either. Woe unto the candidate who attempts to carry water on both shoulders on the picnic location question.

FEAR OUTCOME OF ATTACK

Victim of Desperate Prisoners, Again in Hospital.

Timco Kapeluch, jail trusty and victim of an attack by desperate prisoners in a series of attempts to escape jail recently, who had been discharged from the Bellefonte hospital, was taken to the Cottage State hospital in Philipsburg, where he is said to be in a very serious condition as a result of complications from injuries received in the attack in jail.

Our readers will recall that Kapeluch was attacked by Ed. Fiddell and Arthur Price, two of the three Rockview penitentiary convicts, who became desperate in an effort to break jail in Bellefonte and who are now safely locked up in cells in the death house at Rockview.

Kapeluch's condition is considered serious and upon the outcome of his treatment in the Cottage State hospital will determine a murder trial.

ISHLER BARN DESTROYED

Fire on Rockview Penitentiary Property Brings Big Loss.

A fire of undetermined origin on Tuesday afternoon caused a big loss when the Ishler barn and crops of hay, wheat and oats in straw, were barned. The loss was placed at $5,000 for the barn and $6,000 for the crops, a total of $11,000, covered by insurance.

The fire had gained considerable headway and sparks several times started fire on the roof of the nearest barn, known as the Lansberry barn. The prison firemen, with their chemical fire fighting apparatus, however, were able to save the Lansberry barn. The Ishler barn was located along the main state road between Pleasant Gap and State College.

Diphtheria Prevention Clinic.

A meeting was held Tuesday evening in the Red Cross rooms in Bellefonte at which a committee was appointed to assist the State department of health to launch their campaign to immunize all children between the age of 6 months and 6 years to protect them against diphtheria. This treatment is free to all parents who wish to have their children protected. The first diphtheria prevention clinic will be held next Tuesday, Aug. 21, at 1 P. M., in the Red Cross rooms, Petrikin Hall. Dr. J. L. Seibert, county medical director, and Dr. David Dale will have charge of the clinic. The committee will visit the different homes and leave a permit urging the parents to have their children treated. These permits must be signed and sent to Miss Daise L. Keichline, Bellefonte, not later than Saturday noon.

PAID DEARLY FOR USING NET TO CATCH SUCKER

Two Young Men Fined $20 and Costs of $2

TWO OTHERS ESCAPED

It proved a very expensive trip when two young men of Spring Mills—Lee Musser and William Confer—were caught by Game Protector Thomas Mosier on Saturday. They were using a throw net in Penn's creek and had for their catch one little sucker. It cost them $22

"There were four in the party," said Mosier, "but the other two young fellows ran away and the two arrested refused to tell the names of their pals. The two caught paid a fine of $20 and costs of $2. I think they were old hands at using a net but believe this was their first try at it this year."

SAMUEL BRYAN HONORED

Talented Leader of Odd Fellows Band Given Cornet.

Samuel Bryan, of Bellefonte, widely known and highly talented musician, was the recipient of one of the very best made band and concert instruments—a finely finished and valuable Conn cornet—at a banquet in the Odd Fellows hall here on Monday evening.

Mr. Bryan has been director and leader of the Odd Fellows band from its start and has taking much care in his work so that the organization has grown until it is one of the most popular bands in this part of the state, generally filling several engagements a week during the season from spring until late in autumn.

His efforts have been given freely and his talent has been used so skillfully that every member of the Odd Fellows band has advanced rapidly and well. In appreciation of these services, the members arranged for the purchase of the cornet for Mr. Bryan and it was presented at the banquet on Monday evening, Manager Willis Wion presenting the highly valued instrument

Hardly did Mr. Bryan have the cornet until there was a general request for some music but he was so much surprised and so gratified that he hesitated. However, the band was delightfully entertained with singing by Master Irvin and his sister, Miss Marie. Robert F. Hunter was an invited guest and was chosen as toastmaster, receiving a number of appropriate responses. Altogether it was a most delightful affair and will long be remembered by Mr. Bryan and his fellow members of the Odd Fellows band.

Candidate for County Treasurer.

Ira G. Burkett, of Stormstown, one of Centre County's well known Republicans, was a Bellefonte visitor on Monday and while here formally announced his candidacy for Republican nomination for County Treasurer. Mr. Burkett stated that he had entered the contest at the urgent request of many Republicans who are desirous of seeing all sections of the county represented in the Republican ticket to be nominated on September 18th. Mr. Burkett was a Republican candidate for Prothonotary some years ago, but met defeat at the polls. That defeat, however, has never affected his loyal allegiance to the Republican party. He is thoroughly qualified to ably administer the duties of the office to which he aspires. In submitting his candidacy to the Republicans of the county Mr. Burkett assures them that their active support will be greatly appreciated.

Candidate for Commissioner.

As will be noted in the regular column for political announcements, John A. Way, of Half-moon Township, has formally entered his candidacy for Republican nomination for County Commissioner at the primaries to be held on Tuesday, September 18th. He filed his petition at the Court House on Monday, the signers being largely residents of his home section of the county. In announcing his candidacy Mr. Way declares that if nominated and elected he will devote six days each week to the duties of the County Commissioners office, unless unavoidably prevented from doing so by illness. He asks that all Republicans in the county kindly consider his name when they go to the polls on September 18th.

Party at Pine Glenn.

A most delightful party was a feature at the home of Mrs. Sarah Boak, of Pine Glenn, on Tuesday evening. A delicious supper and general good time afforded desired entertainment. There were 24 persons from the Snow Shoe district in attendance.

There to Stay.

Two aunts had come to visit at Esther's home at different times this summer, and each brought a small baby. Esther's surprise and chagrin was great when they left, taking their babies away again.

Then one day a new baby sister came to Esther's house.

When they told her the news she hurried over to our house and announced: "We've got a real stay baby now, 'cause this one was borned to us."

Alas and Alack.

Mr. Grill—It is clearly noticeable that the members living at this club are not satisfied with their breakfast.

Mr. Fizel—We suggest that the president act as chef for a week to get it started right.

Mr. Grill—Very well; and at the end of his week a successor for the following week might be chosen from among the survivors.

Their Busy Season.

Townley—Hello, old man; things humming out your way?

Subbubs—Yes, mosquitoes.

When one is convinced he is wrong, it is weeks afterward before it leaks out; be patient.

Quick Learner.

A man who believed he knew all about parrots undertook to teach what he thought to be a young mute bird to say "Hello!" in one lesson.

Going up to its cage, he repeated that word in a clear voice for several minutes, the parrot paying not the slightest attention.

At the final "Hello!" the bird opened one eye, gazed at the man, and snapped out, "Line's busy."—Stray Stories.

Small Town Bright Lights.

The 100 per cent electrically lighted town of the United States is Johnstown, Colo., according to E. A. Thompson, manager of the Fort Lupton Light and Power company, that supplies the current. Every home in town is wired for electric lights and with few exceptions all these lights are used.

Quicken the Day.

Wife—The time will come when every person will have an automobile.

Hubby (speed demon)—Shucks. Then there'll be no pedestrians to run down.

He Knew Her.

Wife—I had such an interesting conversation this afternoon.

Hub—And who was the listener?

Ever stop to think of this?

We are what we eat!

It's a startling fact, yet a simple truth.

This is the reason every one should know that his food is really nourishing—not merely filling.

Grape-Nuts—made from wheat and barley—is one of the few cereal foods that includes the vital mineral salts so necessary for supplying proper nourishment for nerve and bone structure.

In Grape-Nuts, too, is retained the important vitamin-B of the wheat.

No food has greater influence in strengthening the body of a growing child than Grape-Nuts. And remember, children need the very best there is in the way of nourishment.

Grape-Nuts is just as delicious as it is healthful, whether served right from the package as a breakfast cereal with milk or cream, with fresh or stewed fruit, or made into an appetizing recipe. Try the suggestion given below.

GRAPE-NUTS ICE CREAM

Prepare plain flavored ice cream in the usual way. Just before the cream hardens in freezing, add Grape-Nuts as it comes from the package, in the proportion of one-half cup of Grape-Nuts to one quart of ice cream. If you buy ice cream ready-made, add Grape-Nuts in place of nut meats. You'll find the resulting flavor unique.

Where you don't find Grape-Nuts, you won't find people—

Glory of Past Seen in Ruins

Remains of Structures Erected by Aztecs Surrounded by Latest Type Office Plants.

Mexico City.—Stone ruins and piles which once were great temples and buildings of the Aztecs, churches of weather-beaten stone and medieval aspect erected in the time of the Spanish conquerors, palaces reminiscent of old Spain, houses constructed in the quaint and picturesque Mexican style, modern office buildings, stand together, crazy-quilt fashion, in the City of Mexico.

There is the pyramid of Santa Teresa, situated almost in the heart of the city. Busy throngs hurry by every day, few aware of the fact that it once constituted a worthy architectural landmark in the ancient Tenoxtitlan, the wonder city of the Atecs. Merely a corner of the base remains, surrounded by dust-covered ruins of the staircase and paved walks leading to the temple. The exact age is unknown, although it was probably erected by the Aztecs shortly prior to the Spanish conquest.

Ancient Spanish Cathedral.

A scant two blocks away stands the cathedral, built during the regime of the Spanish viceroys and adorned with the wealth of the conquered race to such an extent that it is probably the richest church on the North American continent. Now, however, it looks upon the busy main plaza of the city.

To complete the picture the Mutual, one of Mexico's largest office buildings, raises itself above the marks of another and distant day.

Mexico may well dispute with Egypt the title of "the land of ruins," for no fewer than 800 cities, great and small, have been uncovered within the territory of the republic. Here are found the crude remains of a people emerging into the first stages of culture at the same time as the ancient inhabitants of Egypt and Mesopotamia, and it was here that the native American race achieved its highest degree of development, founding states and cities which now are but memories, but whose remains still stand forth to proclaim the greatness of their builders.

It has been proved that culture in America had its beginnings in the fertile valley of Anahuac. Who these people were and whence they came seem destined to remain a mystery. Relics seem to indicate that the native American races began their migrations to this continent during the Neolithic period.

Pyramid of Cuicuilco.

The principal structural relic of the first inhabitants of the Valley of Mexico is the pyramid of Cuicuilco, recently unearthed by Dr. Byron Cummings of the University of Arizona, and which stands as the oldest architectural monument in the New World. The pyramid has been preserved to future generations in the same manner as the ruins of Pompeii, as a layer of lava from the neighboring volcano of Xictli completely coated the edifice. The volcanic eruption has been estimated by geologists as taking place some seven thousand years ago.

The builders of this curious monument evidently were in the initial stages of human culture, judging from the materials used in the construction of the pyramid and the crude pottery and implements found in the immediate vicinity. About the year 400 B. C. the Valley of Anahuac was occupied by the Teotihuacanos, or Toltecs, to be followed shortly afterward by the Mayas in Yucatan.

Although little is known of the history of the Toltecs, the numerous remains show them to have been a people of a comparatively high state of culture. Their principal home was situated in the Valley of Teotihuacan, close to the present City of Mexico, and it was here that the greatest number of ruins were found.

The Valley of Teotihuacan formerly was more fertile, and in the time of the Toltecs probably supported a population of 100,000 or more, or ten times as many as the present number of inhabitants of the valley. Excavations at Teotihuacan show that the principal portion of the city was six kilometers in length and three kilometers in width, and, including the outlying districts, the city must have been one of great size.

Edifice Dedicated to Sun.

Probably the largest building in the city was the Pyramid of the Sun, measuring 64 meters in height and 215 meters on each side. Close by is the Pyramid of the Moon, which is surrounded by a more complicated series of edifices. The Temple of Tlaloc, god of rain, consists of a series of apartments, the top one being especially important as containing an altar and two cavities which probably were used in some ritual ceremony.

Probably the most interesting structure so far discovered in the ancient city is the Temple of Quetzalcoatl. It consists of a spacious quadrangular plaza formed by platforms measuring 400 meters on each side and raised several meters above the ground. On each one of these three platforms are four structures, with the exception of the platform to the east, which has only three buildings.

During the greatest prosperity of the ancient city of Teotihuacan it was said to be the first metropolis of North America. Among the objects which have been found in the ruins are shells from the Gulf of California, Maya reliefs from Yucatan and Central America and different articles of the Zapotecs and Totonacus from Oaxaca, Vera Cruz and other regions.

A death blow was dealt to the power of the Toltecs almost a thousand years ago by the invading Nahuas from the north, and the fertile Valley of Teotihuacan fell under the power of the State of Texaco. Today the valley contains but 8,000 inhabitants, most of whom are Indian peons who lead a hand-to-mouth existence. Illiteracy is the rule rather than the exception, and there is not a doctor in the entire region, the people being addicted to magic and witchcraft.

Maya Civilization.

In the meantime, however, far to the south a civilization had sprung up among the Maya peoples, whose shattered works are considered the greatest archeological ruins in Mexico. Chichen-Itza, Uxmal, Palenque and Mitla, besides a multitude of smaller places, now are well known in archeological circles and have excited world-wide interest and attention.

Chichen-Itza is said to have been founded in the year 360 A. D., although it did not reach the height of its prosperity until hundreds of years later. During its golden age it was a populous city covering an area of ten square miles, the seat of a lucrative commerce and a flourishing state. In 1292, however, the army of King Ulmil was defeated by the Nahuas, and the city rapidly fell into decadence and probably was totally deserted shortly afterward.

The ruins of Uxmal are also in Yucatan, close to the border of the State of Campeche. Although of great size, little is known of the history of the city, and while the ruins are on the general order of Maya architecture they are not of striking importance.

Palenque, in Chiapas, probably contains the most beautiful relics to be found on the continent. Judging from the large number of temples, the city probably never attained political importance, but was considered the religious center of the region.

The ruins of Mitla are in the State of Oaxaca and are believed to have been erected by the Mayas or some kindred race. Although first brought to light at a comparatively recent date, indications seem to point to remains of great importance.

Nahuas Warlike People.

Probably the greatest of the native races, however, was that which occupied the Valley of Mexico on the arrival of Cortez. The Nahuas began their invasions of Mexico about a thousand years ago and in a short time had conquered the north and central portions of the country. The invaders were a warlike people and had no difficulty in subduing the degenerate tribes then occupying the rich regions of the country.

The Aztecs were one of the smallest of the Nahua tribes and arrived in Mexico from the north at a much later date than the other branches of the invaders. As all of the best lands then were occupied they were forced to dwell in the Valley of Mexico, then a swampy region of lakes under the dominion of the King of Tacuba. The newcomers, however, were quick to make use of the natural strength of their position and within a short time were able to overthrow the overlordship of Tacuba and extend their supremacy over a great part of the surrounding region. The two most powerful states in the valley at this time were Mexico and Tezcoco, and instead of engaging in a war for supremacy they united in forming a confederation, in which the old kingdom of Tacuba also was admitted as an inferior member.

Drunken Man Divides Roll With All Comers

With his pockets bulging with bills of small denominations, Andrew Swanson of Worcester, Mass., stopped at a street corner and passed out cash to all who passed by. A policeman was one of the passersby, and Swanson was arrested for being intoxicated.

At police headquarters the man's pockets yielded $1,271 and bank books representing as much more.

Envelope Must Remain Sealed for 50 Years

Greenville, Pa.—The Rev. C. A. Sundberg, president of Thiel college, pulling open a drawer in his desk discovered a long white envelope on the upper right-hand corner of which was written "Commencement, 1922."

Thinking it was some communication that had been overlooked, he was about to open it when his attention was drawn to the words: "This envelope is entrusted to the president and trustees of Thiel college; must not be opened before commencement, Nineteen Hundred Seventy Three (A. D. 1973.)"

In the upper left-hand corner of the envelope was typed, "Compliments of His Excellency, Dr. Fritz Holm, 14 John street, New York."

Doctor Holm, lecturer, explorer, scientist and traveler, is gone from here. The college authorities intend to abide by his written instructions. What it is no one knows. It might be a bequest. It might be some historic document secured by Doctor Holm on one of his many expeditions. It might be a forecast of what Thiel will be in 1972. Meanwhile, there is much speculation.

Doctor Holm was the commencement orator.

Reports Chinese Opium Traffic Again Active

London.—China is producing hundreds of tons of opium, says Sir John Jordan, British minister in Peking, and it looks as though she were going back to the old, bad state of affairs before the suppression of opium by agreement with India was brought about.

India, the British minister adds, used to export about 100,000 chests of opium a year, mostly to China; now her exports are only 8,000 chests, almost exclusively to the East Indies. She is prepared to reduce this if there is a reduced consumption.

He says India is loyally and scrupulously observing every provision of the Hague convention. Turkey and Persia, he adds, must be brought within the Hague convention, or the attempt to control the supply of raw opium must inevitably fail. Similarly it is essential that Switzerland join the convention, since that country is one of the most important centers in the world of the drug traffic.

"If," Sir John declared, "the Hague convention is honestly and efficiently enforced today, the opium problem will be solved tomorrow."

More German Motorcars.

Berlin.—The use of motor vehicles in Germany is rapidly increasing. At the end of 1922 there were in use 37,941 motorcycles, against 26,666 a year before; 82,505 private automobiles, against 30,457, and 43,457 motor lorries, against 30,267.

Boy Sings Jazz Tune as Surgeons Operate

Singing "The Livery Stable Blues" in company with the music played on a phonograph placed near the operating table, a sixteen-year-old boy underwent a serious operation in a Chicago hospital. None but a local anesthetic was used.

"The boy has had other operations and hated anesthetics," one of the surgeons said. "We tried music to keep his mind occupied. It was highly successful."

WAITS 60 YEARS FOR SWEETHEART

But Aunt Mira Beach, Now 80 Years of Age, Says Uncle John Is Worth It.

ARE DEVOTED COUPLE

Hanover, N. J.—Uncle Jim Beach and his bride of one year, Aunt Mira, had everything cleaned up as neat as a new pin at the old Green homestead, in Madison road, a few hundred yards south of the old Presbyterian church here, at an early hour on the anniversary of their wedding.

On June 12, 1922, Uncle Jim, then celebrating to the age of eighty years, and Aunt Mira a trifle younger, had walked hand in hand to the home of the Rev. Edward R. Bernard, pastor of Hanover Presbyterian church, a quarter mile away, and had there been married.

There was much to talk about. Both agreed that those months which had speeded on swift wings were the happiest twelve months they ever had lived.

One of the pleasantest things recalled was that about a week after the marriage they had been surprised by a regular old-fashioned Jersey skimmerton, with the shooting of guns and blowing of tin horns followed by the usual feasting.

Would Neighbors Remember?

Then their thoughts ran to the future. What would happen? For instance, would those neighbors who had been so kind remember the date and call to give congratulations, or had their little romance of one short year been entirely forgotten by Hanover folk?

"I wonder!" It was Aunt Mira who made the ejaculation, for there, coming down the highway from the church, was a crowd headed by "the dominie," as most folks in Hanover call their pastor.

"They're Coming Here."

"Oh, Jim! I wonder if they are coming here?" There was a quaver in Aunt Mira's voice and a close observer would have seen a tear in her eyes, but her face was wreathed in smiles as she answered her own question.

"Folks haven't forgotten, Jim. They're coming here."

"We're the happiest couple in the state of New Jersey," was Aunt Mira's assertion to her guests as they were about to leave.

"And having such kind neighbors adds much to our happiness," Uncle Jim added.

Sweethearts in Youth.

In the days before the Civil war people said that Jim, without any pledge to Mira, started out to carve a fortune. Mira saw him start trudging down the Madison road with a small carpet bag for that unknown world of which both then knew so little.

Sixty long years passed after Jim's departure from Hanover, and at the end of that time Mira was alone on the thirty-acre farm, which had been left to her. She could get no one to run the place. Then one day in April of last year Jim Beach came walking into the house.

During his long absence Jim had lived part of the time in Newark and part of the time in Connecticut; he had been married but was a widower. He would be glad to get a job and work the little farm, Jim said. So Mira gave her first and only lover a job on the old farm and in two months they were married.

Boys Drown With Dog Hero.

Muskegon, Mich.—Two boys and their heroic shepherd dog lost their lives in Muskegon lake near the municipal bathing beach. George Jones, aged thirteen, colored, went into a deep hole and Shep, the dog, sensing the danger, rushed to his rescue. As the boy clung to the dog, Averill Hamel, aged twelve, owner of the dog, went to the rescue of both. All went down. Nearby bathers thought the boys were playing. Deputies recovered the boys' bodies in fifteen feet of water. Later they recovered the body of the big dog.

MARIA DECIDES

By CLARISSA MACKIE

(©, 1923, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

MARIA DAY looked about her neat house and decided that there wasn't one more thing to be done. The sun shone in on spotless white paint, shining china and glass, and was reflected in the well-rubbed mahogany furniture. Maria had done every bit of work herself, for the small white house was a pleasure to keep in order. The pantry, too, was in order.

On the groaning shelves were rows of delicious pies and cakes, two roasted chickens, glasses of ruby jelly, and a snowy heap of feathery biscuits waited under a snowy damask napkin. They would still be warm in an hour when it would be all over.

"It" was her wedding.

The parlor was all set for the ceremony. Spring flowers banked the mantelpiece and a great jar of lilacs filled one corner and made the air redolent with delicate odors. The minister would stand in front of the mantelpiece—he had been sworn to secrecy,and so had his wife.

A secret wedding—even Job Lemmon, the bridegroom, did not know it was to take place! Maria's high spirit quailed a little at the thought of the interview yet to come. She must set the table for the wedding feast, change her gown, and then wait for Job, who had promised to come there at six o'clock; dressed in his best clothes. As she carefully dressed, she could visualize Job brushing his graying hair, his fine bronzed face beaming with pleasure. She could see him rushing up to the door, as he had done for the past fifteen years, only in the beginning he had come with a horse and buggy, and afterward cars—three of them had worn out before Maria made her great decision that she had been engaged long enough and that it was time to be married if they were ever going to be.

Job was devoted, there had never been another girl for him, but outside of his business he was a procrastinator. "Some day, Maria, when we get hitched up," was a favorite saying of his. Now it was about to happen.

When Maria came downstairs, dressed in the stiff, white satin that had been prepared for ten years, and which she had remodeled, Job was coming up the path to the front door. She looked very handsome, standing there in the yellowing satin dress, her abundant brown hair showing beneath her grandmother's wedding veil. Her brown eyes had a scared look now as the door opened and Job paused on the threshold of the parlor.

"Jiminy crickets, Maria!" he gasped. W-hat do you mean? You going to be married?"

"Yes, Job."

Silence fell upon the little house. All the ruddy color left Job's handsome face, and he looked middle-aged.

"You—might have told me, Maria."

Maria did not speak. The look in her eyes was maternal. She loved Job.

"Of course, I don't blame you a bit—me a dallying around putting off the day just because we were so happy—and always thinking that some day we'd hitch up together. I expect you got tired of waiting?"

"It has been a long time," she admitted gently.

"I could get over it, I suppose, but I don't want to," he confessed. "Since I came in just now, I feel hurt to think you asked me to come—kinder spiteful, Maria, and that's not like you."

"No, I have nothing to be spiteful for, Job."

Job looked around the room, familiar to him through the long courting period, and he smelled the lilacs. Lilac time and Maria was going to marry another man.

"Who is it, Doc Smith?" he wanted to know.

"No."

"Matthew Hayes?"

"Of course not," indignantly.

"Oh, I suppose it's that man who sells vanilla extract—Phoebe White said he admired you."

"Phoebe is a foolish gossip."

"Who is it, Maria?"

"Can't you guess, Job?"

He pondered deeply. "Old Mr. Fenn."

"Rubbish," sniffed Maria. "If I must tell you, Job Lemmon, the bridegroom is standing in the doorway."

Job whirled around, saw no one, but did see his own reflection in the pier glass in the parlor. He stared incredulously and blushed.

"Me, Maria," he whispered.

"Who else?"

"Maria Day!" Now they were side by side, a handsome, mature pair, with love in their honest eyes.

"I just had to do it to get you started," she whispered, "and I thought I would leave the rest to you. We could go somewhere in the car—"

"Somewhere? Well, I guess! We'll go to the city and buy a new car and then we'll go to—what say, Niagara Falls or Washington?"

"Niagara Falls," sighed the bride contentedly. "I always wanted to go there."

Criticism.

The best story of the week is a remark made by a certain theatrical man not partial to David Belasco.

"I don't like his stuff," said he, "—and I'll find a reason yet."

DODO NOT VICTIM OF MAN

Odd Bird Had No Value as Article of Food—Regarded as Freak of Nature.

Some persons not versed in natural history when they hear reference made to the dodo imagine it to have been some fabled bird of the far-distant past. As a matter of fact, up to about 250 years ago this curious bird was quite plentiful on the island of Mauritius near the African coast, its only known habitat. It derives its name from the Portuguese word "duodo," meaning simpleton.

The dodo was twice as large as an average-sized turkey. Its plumage was ash-colored, its bill dark, and its legs and feet clumsy and yellow. No dodo was ever known to exist after 1681. What caused its extinction is not known.

As the Dutch navigators who landed on the island of Mauritius in the Sixteenth century called this bird "waighvogel," or "nauseous," because it was not palatable with any kind of cooking, it is not likely that it became extinct because it was eagerly sought as a dainty for the table.—American Forestry.

How Old Is That Egg?

Eggs decrease in density as they grow older. Their age may be ascertained by their specific gravity.

Melt two ounces of kitchen salt in a pint of water and place the raw eggs in it. When first laid they will descend to the bottom, when one day old they will almost touch it; when three days old they will swim, and when older will float on the top. The more they project above the water the older they are. A preserved egg will float lower than one untreated, as it is coated so as to make it airtight, thus preventing change of the contents. Its cracking in hot water is not due to badness, but to the same cause—the shell being airtight prevents the escape of gases as they expand with the heat.—New York World.

NIGHT AIRMAIL

Planes Guided Across Country by Powerful Baloons.

Night flying in the air mail service to be inaugurated about August 21 will mean two extra planes stopping at Bellefonte, the planes leaving Cleveland about 11 A. M. and arriving here at 1 P. M. At present there are just two planes daily, both arriving in the morning.

Manager Fred Gilhaus said, "The night flying service will not make any change here except that there will be four planes daily instead of two. The planes will be of the standard type such as are being used and there will be no change in pilots, only a double schedule put into effect."

The American transcontinental air mail service will soon be seen streaking streaking through the darkened skies of night, its pathway blazed by powerful beacons of light.

After having worked steadily on plans for more than a year, the Postoffice department intends to inaugurate the night air mail service about the middle of the present month. Air mail experts and aviation specialists have been experimenting in all phases of night flying and are confident of success.

In the opinion of Postmaster General New continuous and regular transcontinental air mail service "will be a milestone in the history of aviation and an epic in the progress of transportation, and will put the air mail service on the basis of an independent postal service."

Under the proposed schedule for the service after night flying has been inaugurated, air mail will leave New York City shortly before noon, go to Cleveland; then to Bryan, O., and then to Chicago, arriving there at sundown. From Chicago, another pilot will take the mail and fly about 1,000 miles, one-third of the trip across the continent, in the dead of night.

Leaving Chicago, this pilot will turn southwest to Iowa City, thence go to Omaha, on to North Platte, and into Cheyenne at dawn. A relief pilot then will start from Cheyenne and head for Rawlins, Wyoming, thence to Rock, Wyoming, then southwest to Salt Lake City, and from there will proceed straight for the Pacific Coast, passing over Elko and Reno, Nevada, and landing in San Francisco as the street lamps begin to glow.

Thus will be marked another great stage in the development of the post, life-blood of a nation. From the slow stage coach, fighting its way over dangerous cliff roads and against Indian bands, to the modern railroad, considered at first the last word in the speed of science, mail will now be transported across the continent in twenty-eight hours when the night flying of the air mail begins.

Equipped with beacons of 600,000,000 candlepower, the five regular air mail landing fields from Chicago to Cheyenne will create an artificial aurora borealis, visible for 50 miles from its source under good atmospheric conditions, to guide the pioneers of the air mail. These giant beacons will swing around the tops of towers and will make three revolutions every minute. The lights will be operated only when a plane is expected.

Besides the powerful beacons at the five regular stations, emergency landing fields have been located and lighted every 25 miles along the route. These smaller beacons will be visible for 30 miles. Each plane of the night air mail service also will be equipped with bright searchlights for forced landings.

When the clouds are low and heavy and the pilot is forced to fly at a low altitude, flashing signals, similar to traffic guards on city streets, but whose lights will be directed towards the skies, will be located every three miles along the air mail route. On a clear night a pilot 7,000 feet up will see a narrow line of lights stretching along the miles over the level prairies.

"There goes the air mail," will cry descendants of the American pioneers who first hailed the stage coal mail and then the steaming, glistening locomotive.

"No transportation," said Director Egge of the air mail service of the postoffice department, "is successful unless it can be operated day and night and through wind, rain, snow or sleet.

"The night flights of the postal planes cannot wait upon the will of the elements, but must take conditions as they find them. Almost one-third of the day flying is made through rain, hail or fog, and it is probable that the night flyer will have to bear the same conditions."

Operation of the day air mail service during the fiscal year 1923 was 96.73% perfect, the highest efficiency attained since the establishment of the service. During that period the air mail covered 1,589,389 miles.

A CLEVER MUSICIAN

One of Frank Wetzler's Milesburg Players Making Hit.

One of Frank Wetzler's band boys—Walter A. Hugg—is carrying the fame of his native county far and wide by his clever musical achievements. He is one of the best saxophone players to be found anywhere and formerly played in the Wetzler's Milesburg band.

This season he is traveling with Roman's Classical Syncopaters, from Reading, which recently defeated the most famed orchestra in the New England states—Broderick's orchestra from Merrimac Park, Lawrence, Mass.

The defeat was very interesting in view of the fact that it occurred at a special social function in the Sunset ballroom in Riverton Park, Casco Bay, Portland, Maine, advertised as the largest and finest in New England. They had special little folders printed advertising the battle royal in music and there was a large attendance of New England's music lovers and critics.

For three seasons the Broderick's orchestra had met all challengers and remained undefeated. The fame of the melody of the Roman's Classical Snycopaters was gaining in New England and the battle was staged. It was a great evening for the Reading boys and it is very interesting to our readers because one of the boys was Walter Hugg, a son of Toner A. Hugg, of Milesburg.

CHEAPER FLYING RATES

Ride for Eight Minutes for $3 Attracts Passengers.

R. Haines, who formerly served in the army overseas, departed from Bellefonte on Saturday for Beech Creek, Lock Haven, and working northward with stops at towns and cities between here and Buffalo, N. Y., apparently meeting with much success in his new venture of giving the public rides in the air at very much reduced rates.

Pilot Haines, his wife and mechanician operated in Centre and Clinton Counties during the past week. His wife returned to her home in Lancaster before the men started on the trip toward Buffalo.

It was only several years ago that Pilot Gilbert Budwig took passengers for their first rides through space over Centre County, charging $15 for 15 minutes. He said that was the very least that could be charged and make a reasonable profit. Early this summer Pilot "Windy" Smith was in this vicinity and charged $7 50 for 15 minutes. Haines has all these rates beaten and was taking folks rides for $3 for 8 minutes.

The reduced rates seemed so attractive that many took advantage and the total secured run well over $500, the amount taken at Beech Creek alone during the week-end amounting to $317. Haines is spoken of as a quiet fellow, with little to say, but a skilled flyer. His plane was described as having a spread of 64 feet, weight 2,100 pounds and carrying five passengers at a trip. It cost $6,500.

He did not linger about Bellefonte much, respecting this territory which Henry Noll, of Pleasant Gap, has been providing air rides and thrills for some time.

Haines stopped at the Bellefonte aviation field while here and came in rather late one evening, it being close to 8 o'clock and almost dark, but landed successfully. He was at Howard recently and was liberally patronized, his passengers claiming that the one way to see the real beauty of Bald Eagle valley was to view it from an airplane.

Centre County Baseball League

State College tied Bellefonte for first place in the Centre County Base Ball League last Thursday in a twilight game of five innings, winning in the fifth by a score of 8—7. The first half of the sixth inning was played, with Bellefonte at the bat, and our team scored one run, making 8—8, but the umpire then called the game and reversed the score to the fifth inning, saying it was too dark to complete the sixth inning.

Millheim, on Thursday, defeated Centre Hall, 3—2.

State College on Saturday won from Centre Hall, 9—2.

Bellefonte played Millheim on the latter's diamond, winning 10—1.

OVER THE COUNTY

S. W. Smith, senior editor of the Centre Hall Reporter, and his family have joined the motor party enthusiasts and are enjoying a trip to the northwest to spend a few weeks with relatives. Michigan is their destination.

Master Marvin Ishler, of Centre Hall, is a proud boy these days and more fortunate than most lads of his age. The young chap is a recipient of a beautiful Shetland pony which his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Domer Ishler, purchased for him recently.

Paul Stoner, a young son of Mr. and Mrs. William Stoner, of near Centre Hall, injured his back when he fell from the top seat of the bleachers while witnessing a game of baseball at the Centre Hall diamond recently. He fell backwards, a distance of 8 feet. His injuries are not considered serious.

Small properties in mountains, and especially those located along streams or on which there are good springs, are in big demand for hunting sites. It was for this puppose that the Snyder property at the west end of Pine Hollow, in the Woodward district, was sold to a Shamokin hunting club.

It is expected that the new State College postoffice will be ready for occupancy within the next eighteen months, according to a communication received from the First Assistant Postmaster General by Robert M. Foster, of State College. The letter states that Congress has appropriated funds for the federal building and plans were recently approved by the department. The building will be two-story brick to cost $110,000.

The Centre County Farmers Cooperative Association will hold their annual picnic in the Holmes woods, at Pine Hall, on Saturday, August 25th. The picnic will be followed by a festival in the evening.

Black bears are reported to be more plentiful in Centre County this year than for several seasons past. Motorists report having seen them on the road through the Woodward Narrows and also on the Port Matilda mountain road. A bear on the latter road seems curious about motor cars and stands at the side of the road frequently, watching the motorists pass but never attempting to start anything.

What is expected to be the biggest festival of the season is anticipated by the Otterbein Brotherhood when they hold their fair and festival on the island near the "Falls" at Bellefonte on Saturday evening, the 18th, unless weather conditions should not be favorable. The men have made arrangements for a number of stands and will sell "Hot dog" sandwiches, peanuts soft drinks, and have several other attractions as well as the Odd Fellows band.

Although frightened very much, Billy Hackman, Jr., of Rebersburg, escaped serious injury when the horses he was driving became frightened and ran away. He was driving the team in a two-horse wagon and was going along the public road when Paul Winters, of Wolfs Store, came speeding along in a car and collided with the wagon, scaring the team. Hackman was thrown from the wagon and one of the rear wheels passed over him when the horse ran away.

Pine Grove Mills.

Fred Martz, of Cincinnati, O ,is spending his vacation here among friends.

Rev. Fisher, wife, Miss Flora and young Samuel, of Clarion, are spending their vacation among former parishioners here.

Rev. John E. Reish, of Loganton, is visiting his mother at Rock Springs during his vacation.

Rev. J. W. McAlarney gave notice to his flock last Sunday evening of his two weeks vacation he is spending among old parishioners at Elimsport and Montandon.

Rev. J. M. Kirkpatrick, with his sister, Miss Helen, of Philadelphia, made several short stop visits here on Tuesday day morning to pass word along the line that there will be preaching on the last Sunday in August at 10:30 A. M.

Among those who camped out as auto parties for an outing at the old Ross Place, the Murdock camp, were the Shaffers, Gentzels, Hazels, Kimports and Baileys. They enjoyed the big eats and a social good time, motoring via McAlevys Fort, Pine Grove and Boalsburg.

Mrs. D. W. Thomas was called to Hickory, N. C., to add her blessing to a new arrival, a sweet baby girl, at the home of her son Miles. He had asked for a ball player but evidently the request was out of order. Both mother and babe are doing nicely.

Miss Helen Elizabeth Goss, of Tyrone High school, is having her outing among friends in and out of town this week.

Sheriff Harry Dukeman, of Bellefonte, was here last week on a business mission, but did not distress his victim.

Rev. A. M. Lutton, former pastor of the Lutheran church here, is spending his vacation among parishioners, accompanied by his wife and two children. Since leaving his home he has submitted to several surgical operations and is on a leave of absence to recuperate his shattered health.

Bear in mind the Baileyville picnic. Bring big eats. There will be ball games during the afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. James Dreese, of Snyder County, motored over for a two days visit among old friends here and at State College.

Late news from the Danville hospital is that our friend, Elmer Barr, is convalescing and will soon be discharged.

Fred Gerhart is having his home reroofed with asbestos shingles.

Rev. James Runkle and wife and daughter, of Altoona; Mr. and Mrs. John Rishel, of Centre Hall; Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Williams, of Altoona; were entertained at the J. H. Williams' home on Friday afternoon.

George Woods and wife and Master George the III, came over from Pitcairn for a two weeks visit among home folks.

On Saturday, Aug. 25, the farmers' picnic will be held in the Holiness grove at Pine Hall. Everybody invited to this basket picnic.

Miss Ida Williams is plying the needle among her lady friends at Graysville this week.

I. G. Barket, of Stormstown, was here seeking support for County Treasurer on the Republican ticket.

Mr. and Mrs. Joe Fleming, accompanied by Mrs. Fleming's sister, Mrs. Clark, of Ohio, motored to Mifflin County to spend Sunday among relatives.

Mrs. Mary Martz has recovered from her recent illness so as to be able to walk about her home on Main St.

Mother Mary Brown, who has been ill from a fall, is now improving.

J. Alf Reed, of the Greensburg Coal & Coke Co., is spending a week among home folks, looking well.

The past few days have been favorable to the farmers to house outstanding grain, which is badly damaged.

Miss Miriam Ruth Miller, of State College, is spending a two weeks outing with her cousin, Mrs. E. V. Dale, on the Branch, and is having a rollicking good time among her country cousins.

John Wolf and wife, of Avis; Mr. and Mrs. McMahon, of State College; C. A. Johnson and wife, of Madisonburg; Grandmother Rachel Wilson and a lady from Ohio, were entertained at the Johnson home on East Main street.

Farmer Ed Harpster last Wednesday purchased a new Overland car. The following day he and his wife tried it out by motoring to the county capital on a shopping tour, taking supper with her sister, Mrs. Roan. Consequently, they were a bit late in arriving home and found their house filled with neighbors who came to remind Mr. Harpster of his 48th birthday anniversary. He was the recipient of many beautiful and useful gifts. A good supper was served and the evening spent in fun and games. It was in the wee sma' hours when the guests departed, with a glad hand and wishing many happy returns of the natal day.

A. C. Kepler is marketing his Irish Cobbler tubers and running them to market. The yield is about 200 bushels to the acre. Prospects are good for a larger yield of the Russet and later varieties.

Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Hess, with their 3 interesting youngsters, were among those who went to the picnic at Selinsgrove on Saturday and spent Sunday with Mrs. Hess's parents, her mother being quite feeble of late.

J. P. Ezelman, cattle buyer of Lancaster, raried among the farmers in the valley and purchased a carload of suckeys for the eastern markets.

Prof. Samuel P. McWilliams, of Cannonsburg, spent a short vacation among his home folks. He has been principal of the High School there for about 23 years.

The Burwell party had a picnic in Shingletown Gap on Sunday and killed a big rattlesnake that displayed 9 rattles and a button.

Morris Smith, of Altoona, visited his parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Smith, on Tuesday.

Comrade Charles Smith and wife are planning to attend the 57th National G. A. R. encampment to be held in Milwaukee, Sept. 1—7. The special train leaves Broad St. station, Philadelphia, on Sunday at 8:30 A. M. and arrives in Altoona at 3:11 P. M., for the west. All comrades take notice and get in the firing line.

J. E. Mayes and wife, F. O. Horn and wife, A. B. Meese and wife, composed a motor party to Lewistown last week to visit S. H. Tate and wife. Sam is holding down a fat job at the Burnham works.

Miss Belle Goheen, of Rock Springs was a caller at the W. H. Glenn home Saturday afternoon. Miss Edna Goheen is an over Sunday visitor with her brother, Mat Goheen, who is not improving as rapidly as his friends had hoped.

Prof. Kront and wife, in their new car, accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Ben Krump, departed Saturday on a tour for the Krump home in Ohio. After a week's stay at their old home, the Kronts will return.

A woman can fool a man and it was fully demonstrated last Friday evening when Mrs. Elmer Rossman gave her husband the surprise of his life. Elmer was decoyed to State College by a neighbor and returned a little later. His good wife met him at the door and in a flash the lights were turned on and 34 happy folks hustled him along, hoisting him to the ceiling, as a reminder of his 37th birthday. He soon regained his composure and joined in the fun. A splendid supper was served, full and plenty, and he was the recipient of many presents. At a late hour, the guests took their leave with a hearty handshake and wishes for many returns of the natal day.

Howard

Do not miss the pie and cake sale to be held by the W. C. T. U., at Walter Yearick's meat market, Saturday Aug. 18th. Help a good cause along as the proceeds will be used for a good purpose.

Mr. and Mrs. Vorie Thompson, of Chicago, Ill., are visiting with Miss Annie Gray this month. Mrs. Thompson and Miss Gray are sisters.

DOG DAYS ARE OVER

Period of Mad Canines and Blind Snakes Ended Friday.

The dog days are over for this year. According to the almanac the period ended Friday. The dog days were ushered in with July 3, coming unusually early this year. Consequently they ended earlier than usual.

Some country folk breathe a sigh of relief when the dog days end. During the period that the dog star, Sirius, reigns, dogs are supposed to go mad upon the least provocation. Snakes are also supposed to be blind during this period and consequently will strike without giving warning.

Jones B. Mayes Dead.

Jones B. Mayes passed peacefully away on Sunday evening at his late home in Lemont. After he and Mrs. Mayes had retired for the night, the latter heard an unusual sound and switched on the light, finding her husband dead. Born August 20, 1849, Jones B. Mayes would have been 74 years old had he lived until the 20th of this month. Just the day before he passed away, he came to Bellefonte to visit with one of his daughters, Mrs. Robert F. Evey, remaining at the Evey home Saturday and most of Sunday, returning to Lemont Sunday afternoon with his grandson, Kenneth Mayes, who motored here for him. During his visit he was in best of spirits and seemed to enjoy himself very much. He had only been in fair health since last February, when he suffered a serious illness, from which he rallied, but had not regained really good health. Mr. Mayes was the last member of a family of seven children. He was twice married. His first wife was Mary E. Brown, who preceded him to the grave on Nov. 26, 1912. His second wife, Mrs. Nathan Grove, survives, together with the following sons and daughters, children of his first marriage; J. Will Mayes, Howard; L. Frank Mayes, Lemont; J. D. and Charles F., Milton; Mrs. Robert F. Evey, Bellefonte; Mrs John H. Mokle and W. A. Mayes, Lehighton; T. E., Johnstown; Maud M., New York city. The deceased was a devoted member of the Evangelical church of Lemont, and believed in living his religion each day. He was formerly engaged in the wagon-making business, his shop having been near Houserville, and in later years he became a dealer in marble and granite, starting the business which has of late been conducted by his son, L. Frank, and which has been very successful. All of his sons, excepting T. E., are engaged in the same business. In the going out of Mr. Mayes, Lemont has lost one of its best citizens—one who was ever ready to do a kind turn. Funeral services were conducted from the home at Lemont this Thursday morning at 10 o'clock. Interment in Boalsburg cemetery.

Death of Infant Son.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas McClure, of Pleasant View, was saddened this week when the babe of the family, Robert, 5 months old, was claimed by death. He had been a patient in the St. Frances hospital in Pittsburgh under the care of a specialist. The body was brought here and burial made this Thursday afternoon. Surviving are the parents, a sister and brother, Martha Jane and Thomas.

College Student Drowned.

Donald Boyce Gorsuch, a second year student in the Pennsylvania State, was drowned on Saturday when seized unexpectedly with cramps while swimming in a dam near his home in Patton. Deceased was 18 years of age. He was an athlete and good runner. His parents, two sisters and one brother survive.

Miss Agnes Rhue Dead.

Miss Agnes Rhue, widely known in her home community, Runville, died Monday at Danville. She was 72 years old. The body was brought to the home of her sister, Mrs. Annie Lucas, at Runville, and burial made yesterday in the Advent cemetery.

Mrs. David Thomas Injured.

Mrs. David Thomas, of Loveville, sustained three fractured ribs and severe bruises last Thursday when the steering gear on the Thomas auto broke and the car got beyond control. While her injuries are serious she is expected to recover.

Wrecked Cars in Collision.

The Studebaker touring car of John Mignot, of Bellefonte, driven by Mr. Mignot, and a Ford touring car driven by Robert Garman, of Bellefonte, collided on the state road near the Pike kilns of the American Lime & Stone Co. on Friday afternoon. Both cars were considerably damaged. The occupants escaped serious injury.

DIPHTHERIA CLINIC

Held in Lock Haven, 150 Given Treatment.

A treatment to permanently prevent diphtheria was given at a clinic in Lock Haven on Friday to 150 children. Another clinic to give the second of the three weekly treatments will be held tomorrow.

The treatment is provided free by the state health department to children of pre-school age. Three doses must be taken to make the treatment effective. No ill effects are felt by the patient while the gradual immudization is being established, which usually requires from six to eight weeks, according to the physicians administering the treatment.

Mr. Harding

It is natural that the death of the President of the United States should cause universal sorrow. But Mr. Harding was more than President. He had in large measure the qualities of heart that drew men to him; he was kindly, sympathetic, human—A wise and capable leader whom the people trusted.

In homely speech, he was a good man.

We need such men in high places.

WOMEN FROM FORTY TO FIFTY

Will Be Interested in Mrs. Hooker's Recovery by Use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

St. Paul, Minn.—"I was going through the Change of Life and suffered from a run-down condition and the troubles a woman has to go through at that time, hot flashes, nervousness and headaches. At times I was not able to do my work, but since taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I am gaining every day and can do my work with more ease than I have for five or six years. I owe it all to your great medicine."—MARTHA HOOKER, 114 College Avenue, St. Paul, Minn.

When women who are between the ages of forty-five and fifty-five are beset with such annoying symptoms as nervousness, irritability, melancholia and heat flashes, which produce headaches, dizziness, or a sense of suffocation, they should take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It is especially adapted to help women through this crisis. It is prepared from roots and herbs and contains no harmful drugs or narcotics.

Write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Massachusetts, for a free copy of Lydia E. Pinkham's Private Text-Book upon "Ailments Peculiar to Women."

JAQUES (JAKES) Give Quick Relief

Haw! Haw!

Two farmers met on a country road and pulled up their teams. "Sir," said one, "I've got a mule with distemper. What did you give that one of yours when he had it?"

"Turpentine; giddap."

A week later they met again. "Say, Si, I gave my mule turpentine and it killed him."

"Killed mine, too; giddap."

Is Your Work Hard?

Is your work wearing you out? Are you tortured with throbbing backache—feel tired, weak and discouraged? Then look to your kidneys! Many occupations tend to weaken the kidneys. Constant backache, headaches, dizziness and rheumatic pains are the natural result. You suffer annoying bladder irregularities; feel nervous, irritable and worn out. Don't wait! Use Doan's Kidney Pills. Workers everywhere recommend Doan's. They should help you, too. Ask your neighbor!

A Pennsylvania Case

J. W. Baughman, 304 E. Third St., Oil City, Pa., says: "Mornings my back was so stiff and sore that sometimes it felt as though it were broken. At times everything seemed to whirl around and black specks appeared before my eyes. My kidneys acted too frequently, breaking my rest at night, so I became run down. I heard of Doan's Kidney Pills and began using them. Doan's cured me."

HOURS OF SLEEP

What Really Constitutes a Good Night's Rest?

Old Tab Apportioning Time to Men, Women, and Fools Does Not Seem to Fit the Case.

"How many hours do you sleep?"

The question was put to me recently, and I answered:

"About seven, off and on. I manage four hours, then I lie awake for one or two, and drop off again, feeling sleeplest when I should arise."

That, I suppose, means that I am not sleeping healthfully, remarks a London Answers writer. But I cannot help it. The more one strives to coax slumber the farther away it seems to drift.

Yet my questioner has perplexed me. He has, in a sense, made me nervous.

How many hours a night do you sleep? And are you satisfied that on awakening you are always completely rested?

The old tab—"Six hours' sleep for a man, seven for a woman, eight for a fool"—has been the bane of my existence for years. I have always tried to persuade myself that I must be very foolish, because the more sleep I can get the better I am pleased.

One man known to me gives appreciative backing to this standpoint, for he says:

"I must be a very real fool, for I sleep nine hours solid out of every twenty-four."

What is the minimum necessary for purposes of health? One reads about distinguished politicians and authors and inventors who do with four hours' sleep a night. Are they supermen physically as well as mentally, or is there some enviable peculiarity in their makeup?

Is the whole thing a matter of personal habit or constitution, or should one be forced to rest in bed, even if unconsciousness cannot be attained, for a certain number of hours out of every day?

A novelist friend of mine who is one of the hardest-working and, at the same time, one of the healthiest men I know, confessed to me recently that he seldom went to bed before 2, and always rose about 7 a. m.

It would be an exaggeration to say that I was amazed, but certainly I was surprised. Also, I was uneasy. I couldn't help feeling that, compared with him, I was a woeful slug-a-bed.

Happily for my peace of mind, I learned later that, though he spent only some five hours in his bed, it was his pleasant habit to snooze in an armchair for at least one hour every day after luncheon.

So far as one can judge, the hours of sleep required by each individual are peculiar to that individual. Yet certain sections of the community have, willy-nilly, to ration themselves as to their period of dreamless or nightmarish insensibility.

Sailors, for instance, learn very soon that four hours at a time is their customary ration, though, thanks to the dog watch, they get automatically eight hours off after the shorter spell.

Obviously, too little sleep must be bad for one, yet in certain medical quarters it has been argued that too much sleep is almost as harmful.

Perhaps some one—doctor layman—will come forward with a statement calculated to comfort and instruct plain John Smith and his wife.

One Sale Lost.

They were strangers in Detroit, and they were standing in front of a large department store, just ready to start on a tour of the city. The little girl, eight years old, was pleading with her mother for permission to go into the store and buy "something"—just anything would do—with the money in the little brown purse she clutched. Apparently it was her summer's savings. At last the mother, trying to present arguments against spending it just then, hit on a happy one. "Tomorrow we'll be in Niagara Falls, Jane," she said, "and then you can buy lots nicer things for a little girl." And Detroit lost a sale.

Inaccurate Observation.

Senator Borah was talking about Rudyard Kipling's slur on America's war record.

"Kipling lived here once," he said, "but he doesn't understand us. His remarks are about as accurate as the mountain farmer's on his return from the city.

"'Yep,' said the mountain farmer, 'the hull town is full o' cabs with cash registers on 'em and red flags to show it is dangerous to dispute the fare. The town folks call 'em taxidermy cabs because the drivers skin ye.'"

English as She Is Spoken.

Joe and Jackson were typically stalwart young Americans, friendly yet somewhat inclined to boasting of their respective families.

Joe said: "You ought to see my father—he has electricity in his hair.

Jackson replied: "That's nothing; my father has rats in his belfry."

Twentieth Child Is Born to Pair

"Just as Easy to Care for 20 as for Five," Declares Wife of New England Farmer.

Portsmouth, N. H.—Twentieth century mothers who limit their families to one or two children are looked upon with scorn by Mrs. Mary J. Barton of Kelleyville, who presented her husband, Lemuel, with a husky baby girl and hung up a new record for large families in New Hampshire. Dora Hattie, the name of the latest arrival, is the twentieth heir to the home of Barton. There are no twins or triplets in the family.

The mother of the twenty is still a young woman. She is forty-five years old and not a gray hair is visible in her head. Her husband is fifty-five, a typical "Yankee farmer," who believes that it is every man's duty to his country to raise as many good citizens as the Lord will allow him.

Though her husband has difficulty remembering the names and ages of his ten sons and ten daughters, Mrs. Barton can rattle off their names and ages in chronological order and without a moment's hesitation. Three of the Barton girls have married, five are working away from home and the remaining twelve children are playing or working on the 260-acre farm in Kelleyville, a part of Newport, but six miles from the center of the town.

Birthdays Come Often.

Birthdays are plentiful at the Barton homestead. Nearly every month on the calendar is represented by a child, July particularly, as five were born in this month.

Their names were adopted from the relatives on both sides of the house until the supply gave out; then the names of friends were used. They cover a wide range—Biblical, old-fashioned and new-fangled names are all represented.

"They are all fine and healthy, thank God," said Mrs. Barton. "All of my children have lived and the only sickness they have suffered were children's diseases. We had a regular epidemic of whooping cough in the house five years ago. Thirteen of the children had it at once. A few years later my husband and twelve of the children were taken down with the measles. Lemuel was very dangerously sick, and for a time it looked as though the children would lose their father.

"As the children grow older they are able to assist me in caring for the younger ones," Mrs. Barton continued. "The clothes, of course, can be handed down from one to another and they are certainly worn out before they are thrown away in this house. I love each one as though he or she were the only child we had, and babies will continue to be welcome here so long as God cares to send them. It is as easy to take care of twenty as of five, I have found."

Six of the Barton children are pupils at the rural school a mile from the farm. They comprise one-fourth of the entire enrollment of the school. In past years the Bartons made up more than half of this school.

The original Barton homestead in the south part of the town was the birthplace of eighteen of the children.

Married 30 Years.

Mr. and Mrs. Barton were married thirty years ago, at Haverhill, N. Y., where Mrs. Barton lived. Before her marriage she was Mary J. Young, and both the husband and wife are descendants of Revolutionary stock. The Bartons were among the first families to settle in New Hampshire. Mrs. Barton's ancestors went to Pennsylvania on their arrival from England.

Though Mrs. Barton took no course in child culture and followed no set of modern rules for rearing children, her wide experience has qualified her as an "expert in motherhood." She gives the following rule to mothers:

"Teach your children to love and respect you from the very beginning. Be firm with them, make them obey, but do it in such a way that the child will have trust and confidence in you rather than fear. Give them the best education you can possibly afford and teach them religion and the Gospel while their minds are impressionable. Above all, accept the children that God sends to you; He will always provide for them in some way."

NEW ROOSEVELT TROPHY

The new Roosevelt trophy has made its initial appearance in the West, where it will be competed for both at Cheyenne's Frontier Days and the famous Pendleton, Ore., roundup in September, on a point basis. It will represent the world's championship for all around cowboys, with broncho busting the high point. The trophy was designed by Eyrie Powell and the sculpture of the equestrian figure was done by George T. Brewster.

Girl Pronounced Dead at Birth Conquers Disease

Superior, Wis.—Pronounced dead by a group of physicians shortly after her birth four years ago and having successfully combated fourteen specific diseases since that time, Beverly Jean Harrer has just observed her fourth birthday anniversary as one of Superior's perfect children.

Local physiologists are firm in the belief that but for the fact that the child was of an age when worry is unknown, death would have been inevitable.

Her history follows:

Born June 23, 1919. Weight, one pound.

Three months old, operated for abscess on neck.

Four months, stricken with double pneumonia; right lung became affected.

Next three months, compelled to lie on a hot water bottle, kept at body heat.

Pneumonia followed by pleurisy and brain fever with a temperature of 108½ degrees.

Brain fever abated, followed by typhoid of the bowels. Child's body turned black and became rigid.

Typhoid combated successfully, and paralysis set in on right side.

At this time she was one year old and weighed eight pounds.

Parents were afraid teeth would not grow because of all the diseases, but at age of two years a perfect set grew.

Since the age of two she has had all the ailments of childhood including mumps, chickenpox, tonsilitis, measles and removal of adenoids. Today she is a healthy, romping youngster.

Great Sea Monster Infests Inland Lake

Omaha.—An order to a Boston firm for a whale harpoon, line and whaling gun was mailed from the town of Alliance, Neb. With it went the interest of thousands of Nebraskans, whose curiosity for years has been piqued by the mysterious freak of Alkali lake, near the village of Hay Springs, Neb.

For two years reports have been originating from farmers that a huge amphibious monster resembling a prehistoric dinosaur has made the alkali water its habitat, coming out at various intervals to prey upon live stock and in some instances terrorizing swimmers, fishermen and autoists who camped near by.

All doubt in Hay Springs as to the truth of the animal's existence was destroyed two weeks ago, when three tourists appealed to the Hay Springs chamber of commerce to rid the lake of the antediluvian monster, because they had been chased for several yards by the animal.

Two of the tourists were from Texas and the other was a Nebraskan. One of the trio sent in a signed communication to an Omaha paper asking for aid in capturing the freak.

By unanimous vote the Alliance Anglers' club took the first step in ordering weapons. A large posse will be formed, the members announced, and the lake will be searched with the aid of a large drag net. Men with boats will watch the marshy sections with guns and hooks.

Gotham Grows in Oriental Aspect

Hot Nights Bring Crowded City Life to the Roof Tops and Open Streets.

New York.—Oriental peoples for centuries have been making use of their house tops. The cause, of course, is the intense and protracted heat of those lands. Their dwellings, lacking in ventilation as we know, are almost unbearable and almost every possible activity is carried on in the open air. Public affairs crowd the streets; domestic life seeks the roof.

According to this standard it has struck more than one student of racial characteristics that New York is becoming more and more an oriental city, especially when hot weather comes along.

The trouble is that New York's architecture is not adapted to that sort of an existence. Roofs coated with tar and gravel were never intended as sleeping places for the multitude. Fire escape galleries are not built upon the same style as Eastern balconies; hot curbstones are poor substitutes for grassy terraces leading down to tinkling fountains.

Roofs Are Crowded.

Yet every hot night in New York will find these uncomfortable and heat-enfolding roofs crowded with restless sleepers above every tenement rookery and apartment house hive. It will find thousands of fire escapes filled with restless, roped children. It will find the panting populace seeking what air the weather man vouchsafes upon stoop and curb, park bench and grass plot.

Hundreds of small merchants whose stores line the long avenues and whose staffs of employees are made up of their relatives, sit and talk and doze and wander about the doors of their shops far into the night rather than take the damp, hot plunge into their indoor sleeping quarters.

"It reminds me of Bombay or Bagdad," said a man who has traveled much in the East and who was having his first glimpse of New York outside the bright lights. "It is true that you have a very large oriental population—or at least a very large population whose traditions and instincts are those of the East. You can see that by the unconcerned way in which they resort to sleeping out of doors. But your buildings are entirely unsuited to that sort of life. Why don't you build your house tops as they do in the Orient and give these people some real comfort? Of course they will huddle together indoors. They don't know what privacy is as you and I understand it. The living space of their ancestral homes has always included the outside as well as the inside.

Farmer Has Advantage.

"It is true that out on the farms of the Middle West you will find that on a hot night some of the boys will find a cooler bed on a pile of hay and some of the girls will sleep in a hammock on the front veranda, but you would never find pa and ma dragging a mattress up on the roof, no matter how hot it might be."

"It might be that conditions here are due to the great congestion in New York," some one suggested.

"No," replied the traveler. "If you will look at these people camping out for the night you will see that most of them are of eastern or southern stock. The northerners and westerners are sticking indoors, perspiring, of course, but dignified at all costs."

LEGENDS TOLD OF HARPIES

In Mythology It Is Related That They Swooped Down and Despoiled the Table of Aeneas.

Harpies were celebrated in many ancient tales as a race of monsters that infested certain shores. They were usually represented as having a woman's head and the upper part of the body and bird's wings, tail, legs and claws, says the Detroit News.

It is related that these fierce monsters flew down upon Aeneas and an expedition from Rome, when the party had landed for rest and refreshment among a group of Grecian islands, and carried away the food from the table before them, and even attacked the men themselves.

The men then armed themselves with swords secretly and waited for the next approach of the harpies, intending to kill them when they came near. But the nimble marauders eluded all their efforts as before. When the expedition left the island the leader of the harpies perched himself upon a rock overlooking the scene and in a human voice loaded Aeneas and his companions with taunts and execrations.

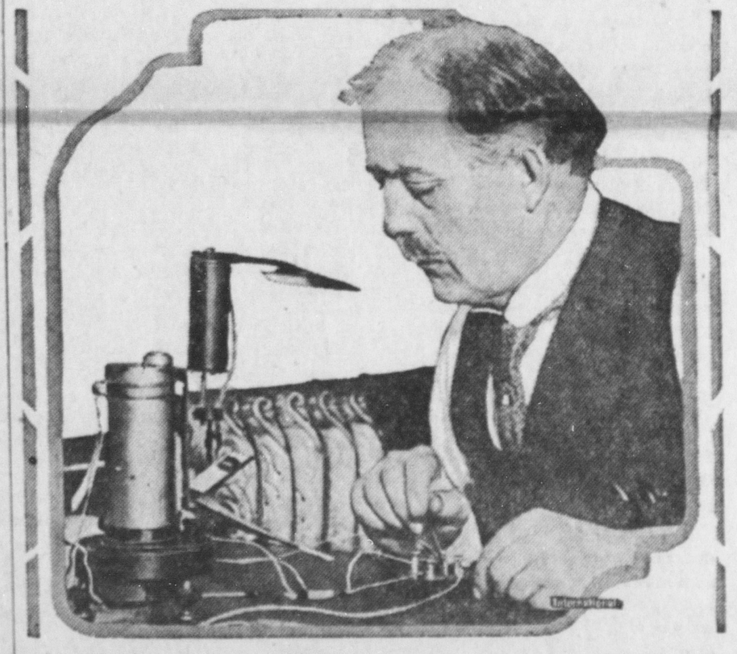
New Detector of Criminals



The "soul searcher" is the latest scientific machine to wring the truth from criminals, only Dr. Albert Scheider, here shown with the apparatus at the Criminology department of the University of California at Berkeley, calls it a capillary electrometer, being an improvement on laboratory equipment used for years. The suspect is asked to give the first word that comes into his mind after a word is furnished him by the questioner. His mental vibrations, transmitted through his fingers, are recorded and if they jump very high it's a sure sign he is guilty.

This Does for the Grasshoppers

Here is an outfit being used to exterminate grasshoppers, which has proved very popular with nurserymen and farmers throughout the country. The device, thought out by an ingenious Missourian, is simple to construct and costs little. A mule supplies the motive power and is hitched to a two-wheeled rig. Two wings, six to eight feet square, are attached on the sides and covered with pitch. On driving through the field with this outfit, the insects are startled and strike the shields and stay there.

THE NEW SPEEDWAY

Altoona Project Will Be Opened on Labor Day.

A new world's mark of 125 miles an hour, the highest in the history of automobile racing, will be hung-up at Altoona Labor Day, according to Ora Haibe, the veteran driver. He made an official inspection of the new Altoona speedway for the group of speed demons entered in the 200-mile classic, and he sent a glowing report of the board oval to the drivers and also to manufacturers of cars entered in the big event.

Haibe predicts the Altoona track will surpass those of Kansas City and Indianapolis, and he is confident that all speed records will be smashed when the world's foremost drivers step on the gas to set the new figures. After examining the Altoona speedway, Haibe promptly added his name to the list of 14 entries. He will pilot 1 of the 3 Dusenberg specials.

Jack Prince, the builder of speedway bowls, is rapidly pushing the Altoona track to completion. The grandstand will have a seating capacity of 15,300 persons. Two subways are being constructed under the track to provide parking space within the enclosure for motor cars.

About 115 acres are inside the oval. On that tract there will be developed a football field, an airplane landing station, a baseball diamond, a quarter-mile cinder running track, and a mile dirt track. The entire plant will be equipped to take care of major sporting events of all kinds.

An entrance fee will be charged for each event.

WILL ARREST VIOLATORS

Lock Haven Police Instructed to Watch Motorists.

Centre County folks who motor in Lock Haven will do well to keep in mind the new instructions given the city police there with definite orders to arrest all violators, including those who have no tail lights, irregular headlights, failure to sound horn at street intersections, wrong parking, etc.

It was pointed out, in giving the instructions, that motorists have become lax to the Lock Haven laws and have persistently and openly violated until complaints have been made in large number. This is especially true of late since the regular traffic officer in Lock Haven resigned to accept a more remunerative position.
